

Codebook and annotation instructions

Dehumanisation is the act of perceiving or treating people as less than human. In its most explicit forms, dehumanisation manifests itself in comparing of the other to an animal, machine, any non-human creature or inanimate substance. However, it may also be present through other manifestations, such as denial of agency, deindividuation, extreme negative evaluation as described in the codebook below.

This study focuses on blatant dehumanisation of outgroup defined in national or political terms. You will be given a set of posts by Russian and Ukrainian Telegram channels published in the time of Russian invasion of Ukraine. Read carefully and identify which manifestations of dehumanisation are present in each post based on the given instructions, for each manifestation you should enter either '0' or '1'. In addition to codebook, you are provided with a table of group identifying dehumanising keywords specifically developed for the context of the study where these frequently used words are annotated with respective dehumanisation manifestations. You can start with checking whether these words are present, entering '1' into the respective manifestations columns and proceed by reading the whole post to fill in the remaining columns.

If the post contains explicit comparison with an animal, machine or non-human creature or substance, then automatically the post is classified as dehumanising (no need to evaluate the rest of parameters). Only posts that do not contain any marker of dehumanisation can be classified as non-dehumanising.

Please, note the following:

- a. Comparison of a single leader to non-human does not automatically imply dehumanisation of the whole group. Please, consult the table with keywords for such cases.
- b. Russian state-affiliated sources tend to divide Ukrainians into "good pro-Russian" and other dangerous and aggressive Ukrainians (those who are in favour of independent Ukraine) and typically deindividuates them. This should still be treated as deindividuation of Ukrainian outgroup.
- c. The words that fairly describe clearly observed behaviour, such as 'оккупанты' and 'захватчики' cannot be treated as signs of extreme negative evaluation despite 'фашисты', which is used by both sides as an euphemism.

Codebook:

| DH manifestations                                                                                                                                         | Indicative keywords, instructions                                                                                                                                                                                    | Message transferred in a dehumanising post                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Context-specific examples                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Explicit comparison to an animal, machine or non-human substance                                                                                          | Words like "опк", "вата" or death/killing euphemisms with respect to people (not machinery).                                                                                                                         | "He is an animal", "This unconscious robot", "They're not people, they're consumables", "He is a piece of dirt"                                                                                                                                                                                 | "!!UA 🇺🇦 Зеленский признал - тысячи ВСУшников и нацистов в Мариуполе списаны 💀"; "В том что американцы навязывают своим питомцам террористическую тактику, при которой в роли заложников оказывается их народ, нет ничего удивительного. "; "гниющие нацисты" |
| Deindividualised entitative perception of outgroup                                                                                                        | Words like "укры", "русня", words with no plural-singular distinction. Deindividuation should be quite explicitly mentioned or described, not just follow from what's been said or based on the use of plural forms. | "They are all the same"                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | "У рашистов нет жертв? Ну, ок. Это же для рашистов не жертвы. Хотя это их солдатня."                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Humiliation, expression of disgust or indifference                                                                                                        | Words like "хохлы", "москаль", "свиньи" or the use of death/killing euphemisms with respect to human-operated machinery.                                                                                             | "They're pathetic creatures", "I'm disgusted to even look at him", "I am satisfied/indifferent to see them suffering"                                                                                                                                                                           | "Российские дезертиры бросили БТР в Ольховке 🗿(ツ)🗿.Давайте ещё, пиздючки, нам пригодится"                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Extreme negative evaluation                                                                                                                               | Words like 'орда', 'бандеровец' or swearing directed at the outgroup                                                                                                                                                 | "It's the ugliest one I've ever seen","They're terrible"                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | "Живодёр из Азова"; "Пишут, Болгария, люди выходят на протест против понаехавших борзых укронацистов. Требуют выпнуть чубатых обратно в 404, титушки эдакие."                                                                                                 |
| Denial of agency in outgroup others: incapability for emotions or rationality, absence of free will - ability to decide for oneself and act independently | Words like 'майдаун', 'малороссия'. Denial should be explicit, not just follow logically from neutral description of situation in which the other is passive, losing or suffering                                    | "This slave will always do what he's told", "She's incapable of any feelings", "It's ridiculous to expect rational behaviour from these assholes", "She will never change", "Admitting her mistakes and repenting? Forget it, you think too highly of her. She is incapable of self-reflection" | "Любые попытки нынешнего марионеточного нацистского киевского режима обосновать несправедливость военной операции множатся на ноль." ; "накроман Зеленеский"                                                                                                  |

Denial of prosocial values and communality (the property of belonging to a network of mutually caring others) in outgroup others

Words like "нацики", "рашист". Should be quite explicit. If absence of pro-sociality follows from negative, aggressive deeds, it's not enough unless these deeds are discussed, amplified to underscore anti-sociality or non-communality of behaviour, and framed as natural to outgroup.

"Don't expect sympathy and concern from him, he has no idea what that is", "Such an arrogant, soulless prick can't have any friends"

"Виходить, рашисти тупо кинули своїх у полі, залишаючи вмирати від холоду та голоду. Перша безпринципна та безжальна армія у світі показала себе.", "После общения с серьёзными людьми, сдался первый скептик, с кем я спорил о том, что хохлы-сбушники и менты, будут звонить своим коллегам в Россию и интересоваться: оставят ли их в должности, при лояльности к новой власти? Сейчас идёт активное зондирование этой почвы. "